Hidden Harvest – The Pleasant Hill Shakers were first and foremost Kentuckians, rooted in agriculture. What was their relationship with Kentucky's greatest crop exports: tobacco and hemp? Putting Food By - From its earliest days, food preservation, or “putting food by,” was integral to the health and economy of the Pleasant Hill Shakers. Food preservation was a year-round activity, necessary to sustain hundreds of Believers each year. Food preservation also helped to sustain the village economically as the Shakers sold preserved foods to the world. (Note: Seasonal topic varies)

Summer Orchards – The Shakers managed expansive orchards that utilized diverse planting communities to generate success. Shaker orchard management was rooted in simplicity and garden companionship continues to influence our modern orchards on site.
